

FABRIC OF REALITY

Consciousness which emanates from the Source of existence is forming the universal reality. Once it is emanated, Consciousness remains in its domain; it becomes an extension of the Creator, that is, the Creator Himself. It is as if the Creator were expanding in size from a point (the Source) to an ever growing and space-filling conscious reality, maintaining His primary functions in every point. At the level of primal reality, Consciousness is always there; it never ceases to exist, and forever maintains its records. This feature of conscious reality is very difficult to comprehend by the mind conditioned in the finite space-time understanding. The Source of creation also emanates Life. Life is this portion of the Creator which wants to explore itself and it is doing that in a conscious way, utilising the other part existent in the Father—Consciousness.

In space and time creations (creations issuing forth from the ground of reality), there is a time span for the existence of created manifestations. In those creations the ground consciousness animates the created forms, which undergo cycles of life and death. In this creative process a portion of the ground consciousness, which is animating the created form, undergoes creative changes itself, continuing in this way the eternal process of growth and change. After the animated form ceases to exist, the animating consciousness re-joins the ground reality itself, that is, after 'leaving' another 'garment' it returns to its origin. In our material reality, the physical body disintegrates and ceases to exist in the space-time dimension. However, the 'conscious spark' that used to animate the physical body withdraws back to the energy dimension appropriate to its quality.

Every change in quality of the returned spark of consciousness is automatically registered, because of the inherent function of Consciousness—it is conscious and intelligent, and it registers all changes in its infinite memory stores in non-material expressions, using the properties of Light. Consequently, the fabric of reality is undergoing continuing changes, which are 'recorded' or exist eternally as the so-called 'akashic records'. Because this 'recording' happens automatically (as it is the original and ever existing feature of Consciousness), everything that has ever happened and is happening leaves an imprint in the fabric of reality. Future can also be found in the 'akashic records' as various case scenarios for any event exist in a latent state, in other words, imaginable possibilities exist as potential realities in the ground consciousness.

The existence of the fabric of reality or the ground consciousness of Being is very difficult to grasp by an ordinary being of space and time. In fact it is almost impossible to be comprehended, unless a conscious connection with the ground reality can be made. Creations of space and time are the creations brought forward by Life wanting to explore itself. At any level of conscious reality there is a set of perception tools required for Life to fulfil its purpose. The space-time creations possess a set of perception tools required to fulfil the goal of their specific manifestation. Consequently, these perception tools allow the background consciousness to experience life in that particular manifestation. Inherently, however, they contain the 'blinkers' or the design-imposed limitations on the ability to understand spiritually higher manifestations of reality. In other words, once the reality is comprehended by a space-time creation through a particular set of perception tools, the existence of other manifestations of deeper reality is not conscious. And this is our human experience.
